

The Cathedral of Theology

September 15, 2026 | $64.99, 448 pages, hardcover | 978-1-5140-1744-9

Both Scripture and common sense dictate that good theology requires a firm foundation. But how can we lay a good foundation in our theological work? Moreover, what is theology and how does one do theology? As the first volume in the Pillars of Christian Dogmatics series, The Cathedral of Theology by J. V. Fesko is a work of prolegomena to establish principles for theology. Employing the metaphor of a cathedral, Fesko argues for the supreme importance of attending to the basis of the building before advancing the further work of building out walls, windows, and ceilings. With such topics in hand, his book offers the blueprint, prepares the site, and lays the foundation for a beautiful and lasting theological edifice.

The Pillars of Christian Dogmatics Series

Orthodox Theology for the Modern World

The Pillars of Christian Dogmatics series seeks to foster contemplation of the triune God through the retrieval of classical, orthodox theology for the church and the world. Featuring field-leading scholars, each volume offers an intensive study of key topics in theology using exegetical, historical, philosophical, and doctrinal resources, while simultaneously embodying the interpretive commitments exhibited across the Great Tradition.

Beginning with The Cathedral of Theology, this twelve-volume series will be published in partnership with series editors Matthew Barrett and Craig A. Carter. All contributors are deeply committed to the historic creeds of the church and seek together to address the metaphysical challenges of the modern world with the enduring truths of classical Christianity.
